SOUVENIR

Free China - a Good Friend

I am glad to know that the India-Free China Friendship Week is being celebrated in New Delhi and other places from October 10 onwards. At a time when short-term and opportunistic considerations are creating fresh dangers to the security and stability of the Republic of China with its very fine record of economic and social advance over the last two decades, it is more than ever necessary for those who believe in the freedom of the Chinese people on the Mainland and elsewhere to reiterate their friendship and solidarity with Free China. The Communist regime on the Mainland not only represent seven hundred million Chinese but it is actually at war with those millions of the Chinese people. Any recognition or importance given to that dictatorship is actually an unfriendly act to the oppressed people of China many of whom are fleeing across the waters to freedom every day.

The Republic of China, both when it was on the Mainland and since, has been a good friend of the Indian people despite the churlish attitude adopted towards it by the authorities in New Delhi. It is therefore necessary for Indian non-official opinion to express itself and to reciprocate that friendship.
