My dear Raju :

I find myself here with a lot of time for my own work which means that I should be able to revise most of my essays for the Macmillan volume. As you know, I am at Sapru House which is only three or four minutes from the School. But I miss the Bombay atmosphere at the university to which I have become so accustomed; it has been a wonderful feeling always to be able to pick up the phone and speak to you and other friends. I hope they are well. Please tell Shah and Sinha that I inquired about them. Vivek, I guess is still with you and I hope everything is well at home.

Did Agarwal turn up on that Monday as promised ? I spoke to Appadorai but he seems to know as little about this publishing house as any body else. Caldeira, of course, had not much to say in their favour and he is not joining them. I hope that you have received the O.K. from all the newspapers; will you be able to give Agarwal the typescript by the 31st as promised ? I am keen that we bring the book out by January as planned.

Would you remind Shah to send me the Quest and the reprints here ? Executives like you must be eternally more busy than egg-heads, particularly the hard-boiled ones but nonetheless you could snatch some time to write to me.

affectionately,

S. P. Argyis

Dear Mr. Gae,

Mr. S. V. Raju and I are jointly editing a volume on Fundamental Rights with specific reference to the Constitution 24th and 25th Amendment Bills.

We would like in this connection to reproduce passages from your book "The Bank Nationalisation Case and the Constitution" as we feel that the point of view expressed by you would give our book the kind of balance necessary.

May we expect a reply from you at an early date.

Thanking you,

Yours truly,

S. P. Aiyer
