I am leaving this evening for the Pakkat meeting. I just got and perused Kheran's journal current issue (March 31). Kulapati's letter continues the same theme of keeping up the emergency until "seizing the opportunity", we "become a military-minded nation powerful to depend ourselves in the context of an unstable world." By implication all taxes are supported.

There is one beliving feature or rather a sentence hidden away in a lot of chauvinistic rubbish: (the upside)
"It eclipsed our anti-West-ism. It brought realism to our defence and foreign policy." This is not further expanded or explained lest it may "eclipse" the indigenous militarism.

Which is the theme of the sermon.

For see that I am not unaware of the crack in our front. But what is the good of being aware when I don't know yet what to do for course I understand the philosophy of quality vs. quantity. But I don't envisage ~~how~~ how to fire quality to the target or make a breach in the great wall with ~~more~~ quality apart from associated weight.

~~I~~ I attend the Vichy meeting on April 21. I go by train to reach Vichy in the morning. I return by train same night. The return train starts quite comfortably late so that the day's work may be completed without hurrying. We shall meet there whatever ~~you~~ ^{you} after be your way of returning.

I have just received a nice letter from Karthi. He writes Joshi may not be known but that does not matter much. It is good to see he feels like this. C. R.
Do try and send some dose to him which you may squeeze out of the grant.
