May 7,

My dear J.P.,

I have no news of you and even this letter is an act of faith mailed in the hope that it somehow floats to you! I am not sending you any books because I am told sure that the second class mail will not move at all till the wretched railway strike is done with. If, however, you will kindly tell your young aide to give me your mailing address to which you propose to move later this month when you leave the hospital, I shall send you one of P.G. Wodehouse's later efforts and one or two other books.

I would love to know what progress you are making and what the outlook for your restoration to good health appears to be. So, do get a line sent to me by someone who is with you.

Yours as ever,

Minoo Masani
