My dear J.P.,

I have just heard from my client in Delhi that he would like me to visit Delhi on the 19th and 20th. So probably I shall not be here when you arrive. I shall, however, look forward to seeing you later during your stay which you said would last for a week from the 18th or 19th.

You had told me that you would be glad to come to my place for dinner one of those days so that I could have five or six friends together to discuss the fundamental problems facing the country. Unless I hear from you to the contrary, I shall ask a few people on Monday the 24th. If this is not feasible, do please let me know immediately. I shall take it that silence will mean consent and that you will keep yourself from 8 p.m. on Monday the 24th.

Tuesday 25

I of course will see you earlier on my return to Bombay from the 21st onwards.

With regards to Prabhavati and yourself,

Yours sincerely,
